

Hungary, Arto

This was a transnational conference, where presenters were asked to share their experiences on the shift to Industry 4.0. The topics were chosen based on the participants', primary target groups', and stakeholders' interests. Best practices, case studies were presented, and a demonstration of the platform was also made using a QR code for access. The primary difficulty for the event was finding participants - Covid limits caused a number of events to be postponed during the past several months, which resulted in high intensity and a lack of people's capacity or want to attend activities. Nevertheless, as a result, the event had a high level of satisfaction.
